Disclaimer

This book is a work of fiction. All names, characters, businesses, organizations, places, events, and incidents portrayed in this novel are either products of the author's imagination or are used in a fictitious manner. Any resemblance to actual persons, living or dead, or to actual events, locales, or business establishments is entirely coincidental and unintentional. The town of Hallow Creek, Vermont, does not exist, and no identification with any real community, institution, or individual is intended or should be inferred.

The financial and legal circumstances depicted in this novel — including the foreclosure process, loan refinancing, and related proceedings — are presented solely for the purposes of narrative drama and character development. They are not intended to constitute legal or financial advice of any kind. Readers facing similar real-world challenges involving property, debt, or business ownership are strongly encouraged to consult qualified legal counsel, a licensed financial advisor, or a certified housing counselor for guidance specific to their individual situations.

The themes explored in this novel, including divorce, grief, personal reinvention, and the challenges of small-business ownership, are intended to resonate with readers in a general and empathetic way. The emotional experiences and recovery timelines portrayed are those of fictional characters and should not be taken as representative of any particular individual's experience. Readers who are navigating significant life transitions, loss, or emotional hardship are encouraged to seek support from trusted friends, family members, or licensed mental health professionals as appropriate to their circumstances.
